FROM THE PRESIDENT

As an institution of higher education, our university serves as a powerful connector of individuals who are committed to our vision and mission.

These connections maximize the overall adaptive capacity of the Washburn community by creating relationships, for example, between teachers and students, graduates and businesses hiring them, faculty and professional colleagues, and university programs and services and alumni.

This web of relationships creates the strength and resiliency needed to sustain positive growth in competitive and rapidly changing environments.

In this issue we highlight many of these relationships. At Washburn Institute of Technology, we are fortunate to collaborate with leading business and industry partners to create exciting new programs in climate control and advanced systems technology and, most recently, in heavy diesel construction technology.

Our exciting project with the Kansas Bureau of Investigation (KBI) is progressing quickly with the design work underway for the KBI Forensic Science Laboratory to be located on the east side of Washburn's campus.

Our alumni are an important asset in creating these relationships. Alumni donate personal time and talents to teach guest lectures, mentor students, offer business internships and support our 150 Forward: The Campaign for Washburn University.

New recruitment endeavors build upon recent alumni recruitment support to increase enrollment in neighboring states and attract legacy students to continue the tradition of obtaining a Washburn degree.

Also in this issue you will read about the impact of our distance-learning programs and new graduate education initiatives to meet the needs of working professionals to achieve that next step in their careers.

The greater Washburn community provides value to all of us for a lifetime. Together we will continue to advance the dreams we collectively share for our future.

IN THE FAST LANE

Transformation at Washburn Tech continues with new diesel facility, upgraded auto shop

The transformation hasn't happened overnight, but it wouldn't be a stretch to say Washburn Institute of Technology has shifted gears and moved into the fast lane.

In a little more than a year, Tech has built or revamped three facilities for its advanced systems technology (AST); climate and energy control technologies; and auto collision, automotive service technician and diesel technology programs.

"What Dean (Clark) Coco and his staff have done in a short period of time at Washburn Tech is remarkable," said Jerry Farley, president, Washburn University. "They've made a commitment to their students and serving the community and have made a significant impact.

"We recognize that there are a good number of jobs available in the technical fields and are going to be more in the future. It's important that we have the best facilities we can to train our students."

The upgrades in the auto facility at Tech include painting, revamped floors, technology updates in classrooms that have been overhauled and an expansion in space.

"The appearance here is so much better," said Robert Arney, instructor, auto service technician program.

"The facility we have here is what you would expect at a professional dealership, and that's what we're aiming for. We want this to look as good or better than the shops where we want our students to work."

Tech's sparkling diesel shop features new tool boxes and machinery, including a handful of impressive rigs available for students to learn the trade. The building was unveiled during a grand opening Oct. 8.

FROM THE NOTEPAD

"We've got to go, got to get better. Our philosophy is to think and dream big. We have great support from the university administration, school districts and our community partners. We're building momentum to support our students and the community."

— Clark Coco, dean,
Washburn Institute of Technology

"Congratulations to Washburn Tech on a fabulous job. I look here and see the enrollment. It was 293 in 2012 and 580 in 2013. In a time of declining student enrollment, that is impressive. ... If you're going into diesel, you have to know computers, and you have to know how to turn a wrench. It's not your typical person; it takes a multiple set of skills, which you can learn here."

— Gov. Sam Brownback

"This program will allow technicians to develop their skills, and technicians are the backbone of a dealership because service technicians are who customers rely on. We're excited to be a part of this venture and look forward to seeing the graduates."

— Rhonda Monks, service
director, Case New Holland

"It is special that we're here (Washburn Tech diesel facility grand opening) thanking businesses because they believe in us, believe in Washburn Tech."

— Jerry Farley, president,
Washburn

Washburn Tech upgraded and renovated its auto facility in 2013. Community partners donated materials to the institution.

from concept to reality in such a short period of time is something to be admired,” said Bill Schoenfelder, president, construction equipment company Victor L. Phillips (VLP). “(VLP) understands the importance of this diesel program, and that’s why we support Washburn Tech. That’s why we’re partnering with them.”

In addition to top-notch facilities, staff and students benefit from partnerships Tech has formed with several local school districts and the likes of VLP, Snap-on Tools, Case New Holland and the National Coalition of Certification Centers (NC₃).

The latter is a network of education providers and corporations that supports, advances and validates new and emerging technology skills in the transportation, aviation and energy industry sectors.

Snap-on donates several items to Tech and supplies the facility with a plethora of tools and tool boxes at a discounted rate. Case New Holland donated construction vehicles to Tech’s diesel program.

“For companies to donate these machines to us is something else,” said Zachary Frisbie, instructor, diesel technology program. “We’re able to give the students opportunities you just don’t get elsewhere. This is like a showroom for teaching diesel technology.”

Among the items donated or sold at a discount by Snap-on are meter kits and tool boxes essential to offering the latest in auto technician training.

“We’re proud to be a part of what they’re building here,” said Jon Pine, account manager, Snap-on Industrial. “To see these students in the same shirts, same colors with the same logos – it looks fantastic. It’s a great atmosphere here.” 🏃

FIRST OF ITS KIND

KBI building a partnership that benefits university, community

By Michaela Saunders • michaela.saunders@washburn.edu

Washburn and the Kansas Bureau of Investigation are on the cusp of a first-of-its-kind collaboration that could become a national model for public partnership when the new state crime lab opens on campus.

It will improve public safety across Kansas and enhance Washburn's academic offerings and student opportunities.

Kansas lawmakers signed off on the collaboration in June when they approved $55 million for construction and $3.5 million for building planning and design, which are underway.

The nearly 100,000-square-foot facility will sit just south of the Petro Allied Health Center parking lot at Washburn Avenue and Durow Drive.

With the new laboratory, KBI will enhance its evidence-processing capability, be in a position to grow its laboratory staff and, in time, reach its goal of an average evidence-processing time of 60 days, said Kirk Thompson, the organization's director and a Washburn alumnus.

At the same time, KBI's forensic scientists will become adjunct faculty at Washburn, and students will have access to shared laboratory space, internship opportunities and specialized training at the undergraduate level available nowhere else in the nation.

Jerry Farley, president, Washburn, said the idea of hosting the state crime lab on campus was floated years before it was advanced and approved by legislators.

"This is a wonderful opportunity for Washburn and the state," he said. "This collaboration means even more prestige for KBI. They will be on a vibrant campus, and their scientists will hold adjunct (faculty) positions. This will also enhance the opportunities for our graduates who want to work in that field or for the KBI."

Farley and other university officials have been great to work with, said Thompson, bs '01.

"They really see a benefit to the university, to the students who will be coming and also to the state of Kansas," he said. "They recognize how crucial this is."

Thompson said he is thrilled that the partnership will create so many opportunities for both his agency and for Washburn. But foremost in his mind are the implications for improved public safety throughout the state.

"This is the most important thing the state could have done for public safety at this time," he said. "This will benefit every law enforcement agency, every prosecutor's office, every citizen."

KBI processes forensic evidence for 103 counties in Kansas and works with the other two, Johnson and Sedgwick counties, whenever requested. It has small laboratories in Great Bend, Kansas City and Pittsburg that will remain as they are when the new facility at Washburn opens in late 2015 or early 2016.

KBI also has 55 scientists working in the basement of a former junior high school near 17th and Taylor streets in Topeka. It was built in 1928 and last updated in 1984. Window air conditioners ease some of the burden on the building's cooling system because of all the chemical hoods and other special equipment.

The building, Thompson said, is at its limit and can't hold one more piece of equipment, much less the staff he needs to add over time to hasten evidence processing time to an average of 60 days.

"Having the new facility is huge step No. 1," he said.

The new lab will open with those 55 scientists and support staff and be designed with a capacity of about 100 scientists.

Beyond its primary public safety mission, Thompson said, collaborating with another public institution – Washburn – is "what the public would expect of us."

The facility will allow KBI to meet or exceed the international accreditation standard of 1,000 square feet per scientist of work space. (Right now, they are working in less than 400 square feet each.) About 12,000 square feet of the total laboratory space will be available for shared use with Washburn programs.

The new facility – and the partnership with Washburn – also will help KBI recruit and retain scientists, many of whom leave for other parts of the country after a few years.

"Do you want to work in the basement of a 1928 school building? Or do you want to work in a modern forensic lab on a progressive college campus?" Thompson said. Being able to serve as adjunct faculty for Washburn will only add to that draw.

Having the KBI on campus could be a draw as well for students interested in the specialized field.

Details of an internship program are being worked out now between Washburn and KBI staff. Thompson said the goal is to allow as many as eight upper-level forensic chemical science students per semester to work in the lab after demonstrating capability in the classroom and passing necessary background checks.

"We are going to do as much as we can to integrate students into the work we do here without creating any kind of security or evidence concerns," he said.

Randy Pembroke, vice president, academic affairs, said one benefit of the collaboration that wasn't clear in the early discussions was the breadth of academic disciplines that will be involved in the partnership.

"We have faculty expertise beyond what the KBI lab people have been used to doing," Pembroke said. "We have anthropologists who can bring knowledge of what happens to bones that have been outside for eight to 10 years and art faculty who have expertise in pouring forms and mold-making."

That expertise beyond the obvious forensic chemistry and criminal justice could lead to training opportunities for KBI staff throughout Kansas, research collaborations between faculty and KBI, and even the potential for new programs of study.

"New research techniques could come out of this; an amazing experience could come out of this," Pembroke said.

Thompson agreed.

"We are making sure we don't limit ourselves," he said. "We want to take advantage of the partnership from both directions."

He added: "If I didn't have the in-depth knowledge I do, as an alum I would be very proud of Washburn for creating some very unique opportunities for students, drawing those students into the community, into Kansas and focusing on the hard science. Those students will receive a very high-quality education and start applying those skills and building a resume before they leave the university. That's just a pretty neat thing." 🏆

A 'GIANT' LECTURE

Harvard professor to deliver presentation as Washburn nears 150th

By Ernie W. Webb III • ernie.webb@washburn.edu

A presentation by a leading Civil War-era scholar will be one of the highlights of the spring semester as Washburn continues to celebrate its upcoming sesquicentennial in 2015.

John Stauffer, a professor of English and African and African American Studies and chairman of the History of American Civilization program at Harvard University, is the presenter of the 2014 Lincoln Lecture at 7 p.m. Feb. 6.

"We've done a tremendous job celebrating Washburn's rich history, and that continues this year," said Jerry Farley, president, Washburn. "We have a great opportunity during the sesquicentennial to highlight what the university has accomplished and has to offer."

Stauffer's presentation, titled "Giants: The Parallel Lives of Abraham Lincoln and Frederick Douglass," will discuss the legacies of the two men and why they still matter.

Stauffer's lecture is one of several events at Washburn commemorating the 60th anniversary of the landmark Brown v. Board of Education case. The university will host a Bleeding Kansas and Border War bus tour Feb. 25, a School of Law symposium Feb. 27, three exhibits at Mulvane Art Museum from March 1 to June 10 and a president's concert on May 8-9.

Among upcoming exhibits at Mulvane is a technology fair from Feb. 7 to March 16. This exhibition will feature tools and technology used in teaching at Washburn during the last 150 years.

WASHBURN EXPANDING GRADUATE PROGRAMS

The median weekly salary of people who possessed a master's degree was 22 percent higher than those who had a bachelor's degree only in 2012, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

That is one reason Washburn is expanding its graduate degree programs. By 2014, the number of the university's graduate programs will have increased by more than 50 percent since 2012.

In addition to their practical and professional emphasis, the Washburn graduate programs provide research and other skills with a focus on career advancement.

"My Washburn MBA complements my liberal arts degree with skills to better manage people, projects and processes, and with an understanding of finances that helps me make better decisions," said Gina Penzig, director of corporate communications at Westar Energy.

Washburn graduate students also benefit from excellent facilities, small classes and highly qualified faculty who take a personal interest in their students, said Alicia Schwindt, a student pursuing a master's degree in social work.

"What sets the Washburn University program apart from others is that the staff and faculty care about the well-being of their students," she said. "They not only want to see us succeed in our education and careers, but also personally as unique individuals."

Washburn's new graduate degree programs include a doctor of nursing practice (DNP), master of accountancy, master of health science and master of arts in human services/addictions counseling.

Recently approved are a master of studies of law (MSL) and a master of laws (LLM) degree.

The new programs have been designed specifically for individuals who wish to advance their professional careers. These new programs continue a legacy of excellence that serves as a hallmark of the other well-established graduate programs, including the master of business administration, master of criminal justice, master of education, master of liberal studies, master of science in nursing, master of arts in psychology, master of social work and juris doctor.

The addition of the new programs also has served as a catalyst for some instructional and organizational changes, said Randy Pembroke, vice president, academic affairs.

Pembroke said most of the programs include online components delivered via the new Desire 2 Learn (D2L) system, and the application fee for all graduate programs except those offered by the School of Law will be waived for Washburn alumni during the current fiscal year.

These changes will further help to ensure that all Washburn graduate programs remain practical, professional and priceless well into the future.

For more information about the graduate programs, visit washburn.edu/gradprograms.

WAIVER A NOD TO ALUMNI

Legacy students receive in-state tuition; interstate waiver to include Nebraska, Oklahoma, Texas

By Ernie W. Webb III • ernie.webb@washburn.edu

A new tuition waiver is benefiting the sons and daughters of Washburn alumni who plan to attend the university.

For the first time, legacy students residing anywhere in the United States receive in-state tuition rates. Legacy students are the direct dependents of Washburn alumni.

“In the past, they needed to change their residency to Kansas within six months of becoming a student,” said Richard Liedtke, executive director, enrollment management. “After their first year, they’d be a Kansas resident receiving in-state tuition. We’ve changed that because we value our legacies, we value our alumni and their experiences at Washburn. We want them to send their children our way and show the pride they have for their university, and they should not have to change their residency to do so.”

“This is a benefit our alumni should enjoy,” said Jerry Farley, president, Washburn. “It’s wonderful that we’ve had such an impact on alumni that their children want to come here. That sends a tremendous message.”

Washburn also is expanding its interstate tuition waiver. Two years ago, students in Missouri received the waiver, and students from Colorado began to receive the waiver this academic year. Beginning in fall 2014, students from Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas will receive in-state tuition.

“The interstate waiver has been successful,” Liedtke said. “We’re starting to look at areas in Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas where we think we’ll have an impact.”

Admissions is targeting specific areas in the aforementioned states, including Dallas, San Antonio, Houston and Austin in Texas; Oklahoma City and Tulsa in Oklahoma; and the Omaha area in Nebraska.

Visit with admissions counselors when they are in the area for more information.

Students receiving the waivers must maintain a 3.0 GPA.

ABOUT TUITION WAIVERS

- Legacy waiver: Direct dependents (sons and daughters of alumni) will receive resident tuition and must maintain a 3.0 GPA.
- Interstate waiver: Students from Missouri and Colorado currently receive resident tuition, and those from Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas will begin in fall 2014. Students receiving the waiver must maintain a 3.0 GPA.

THE FUN IN THE RUN

By Ernie W. Webb III • ernie.webb@washburn.edu

“Great. There goes my PR (personal record).” It’s the first thing that ran through my mind when I saw the forecast for the Alumni Association 5K Fun Run and 2-mile campus walk Sept. 28.

After spending months preparing to finish the race in 28 minutes (three minutes faster than 2012, six minutes faster than 2011), I figured at the very least the weather would cooperate.

Nature’s answer: A forecast of heavy rain, gusty winds and lightning.

I tried to be positive: 1. “Well, the pressure’s off now. I can blame the weather.” 2. “Assuming there is lightning, I’m probably going to run a lot faster.”

The original goal was simple: As chronicled in the fall edition of The Ichabod, all I really wanted to accomplish this year was running faster than the lady wearing a tutu. Imagine my disappointment when she said she wasn’t running this year.

Suddenly, I needed inspiration to keep training and settled on breaking 30 minutes. Somehow, and I’m still not sure when or why, that became 28 minutes.

“You might be a little obsessed,” my wife said. “Think about how far you’ve come.”

Perspective. Perfect. A new strategy: Just run for fun. Or fast, if there’s lightning.

Amazingly enough, what was forecast as a powerful storm dissipated. The lightning and heavy rain moved east hours before the race. All that remained was a steady drizzle and a slight, cool breeze – great running weather.

I took my wife’s advice for about a half-mile before the competitiveness took over. I hit one mile in 9 minutes, 20 seconds, my fastest first mile since the George Bush (H.W., not W.) administration.

Mile No. 2, which I reached moments after passing the tutu (she opted to walk this year), came at 18:57, leaving a little more than nine minutes to hit the goal.

Surprisingly, I got a second wind on the last turn of the race, sprinting over the final quarter mile, fueled largely by a large group of cheering alumni, friends and my wife in the last stretch.

Twenty-seven minutes, 55 seconds. Now that was fun. 🏃

ABOUT THE EVENT

About 200 runners, walkers and volunteers participated in the Fun Run and Campus Walk, which benefits the Alumni Association’s scholarship fund. Last year, the event helped to raise about $30,000 in scholarships for legacy students.

The overall winners this year were Travis Seihndel and Jill McCartney. Seihndel finished in 19 minutes, 51 seconds, while McCartney posted a time of 20:59.

SCHOLARSHIPS

- Legacy scholarships (awarded to direct dependents of Washburn alumni) are available to student members of the Alumni Association.

- Online applications for alumni scholarships will be available early in the spring semester. The deadline to submit an application is Feb. 15.

MEET MEGAN TOTH

New Alumni Association assistant director a longtime Topekan

By Ernie W. Webb III • ernie.webb@washburn.edu

The Alumni Association did not have to go a long way to find its new assistant director. Just a matter of miles, in fact.

Megan Toth, a Washburn Rural High School alumna and longtime Topekan, settled into the position in October after spending nearly three years working at the alumni association for the University of Kansas.

Toth, who received a bachelor of science in education with an emphasis in sports management at Kansas in 2011, has ties to Washburn. Her husband, Peter, received a bachelor of business administration here in 2011.

“I took one college class during high school at Washburn, in English,” she said, “and my family has been to games and sporting events at Washburn. My husband went to school at Washburn, his sister went to nursing school at Washburn and a brother-in-law is a pre-med student at Washburn.

“I’ve seen the impact Washburn has in the community and am excited to be a part of that.”

Q: What is your goal at Washburn?

A: One of the biggest things is definitely growing membership numbers. I want to see what Washburn is all about, what makes Washburn special and connect with the alumni.

Q: How did you become involved with alumni associations?

A: I never really thought I’d do this for a career, but in sports management, you are required to do a 40-hour internship during your last semester. Everyone else was doing something with the Royals, T-Bones and other teams, but I wanted to try something different. So I interned with the alumni association at KU, then they created a position for me after that.

Q: What do you enjoy about working at an alumni association?

A: The people you meet. It’s so dynamic. One day you’re talking to a farmer from western Kansas, the next day you’re visiting New York and meeting with prominent alumni. You get to meet some amazing people. 🏃

Skylar Flinn, right, is a former recipient of the scholarship Sue Parks established to give back to her alma mater. Parks, who received a certificate in radiation therapy in 1991 through the university's distance learning program, was honored as an Alumni Fellow in September.

'THE RIGHT PLACE'

Alumni Fellow relishes first trip to campus 20 years after receiving degree through distance-learning program

By Ernie W. Webb III • ernie.webb@washburn.edu

Video tapes, mail and telephones. Call it "old school" learning. It's how Sue Parks, a longtime director at the Nevada Oncology Center, earned a certificate from Washburn in the early 1990s.

"We needed to get our certification to continue our work, and I did quite a bit of research to find the right place to do that," said Parks, who retired in 2000 after a 23-year career in Las Vegas. "I made several phone calls, and Washburn seemed like the right place."

Through Washburn's distance-learning program, Parks and her co-workers/classmates received certificates in radiation therapy.

"The way we learned obviously was a lot different than it is now," she said. "Now you could take an online course with a computer. We had the tests mailed to us and learned from VHS tapes. Washburn did an outstanding job. Every one of us in that class passed our exam."

The long-distance experience made such a significant impact on Parks that she established a scholarship at Washburn, despite having never set foot on campus.

That changed in September when Parks was honored as the Alumni Fellow from the School of Applied Studies. The 1991 alumna and Grand Junction, Colo., resident traveled nearly 800 miles to Topeka on Sept. 12, along with daughters Lynn Donovan and Kayla Arnesen and granddaughter McKenzie Arnesen.

"We figured it was about time for her to see where she went to school," said Kayla Arnesen. "We're very proud of her. She has had an impact on a lot of people and deserves the honor."

The family arrived in Kansas City, Mo., on Sept. 12 and enjoyed a luncheon, honoring her and the other 2013 Fellows that evening. On the following day, Parks visited with several students in two classes at Benton Hall, then attended the Fellows Luncheon, where she and Fellows Thomas Bartlett (College of Arts and Sciences), Michael Falk (School of Business), Pamela (Schmidt) Farrell (Washburn Institute of Technology), Jeff Jacobsen (College of Arts and Sciences), Michael Lennen (School of Law) and Beth Williams (School of Nursing) were honored.

"I'm in awe being honored like this," Parks said. "This means so much to me, to be able to share this with my daughters and granddaughter."

After the luncheon, Parks and her family visited several buildings during a tour of campus. More than 20 years after receiving a certificate, she had her first glimpse of Washburn.

"It's such a beautiful place, a beautiful campus," Parks said. "We should visit more often!"

Later, while attending the Alumni Association's monthly social, After Hours, Parks met Skylar Flinn, who received her scholarship during the previous academic year.

"I was not expecting all of this," Parks wrote in a letter after the fellows weekend. "We felt like royalty while we were there." 🦋

WORTH ITS ‘SALT’

Financial literacy program eases stress for students, alumni, families

By Ernie W. Webb III • ernie.webb@washburn.edu

Thanks to a new financial literacy program, Washburn is helping students, alumni and their families make more sense out of their dollars.

SALT is an initiative that “assists students, alumni and families to navigate financing higher education, successfully manage any resulting debt and build money skills for life,” according to the website for American Student Assistance (ASA), which created the program.

“It’s important that we provide as much assistance as we can to our students, including providing them with a tool such as SALT,” said Jerry Farley, president, Washburn. “It’s an easy program to use and at no cost. We anticipate this having a significant impact on our students and their families.”

By logging onto the program’s website at saltmoney.org, users access an array of tutorials, videos and instructional materials on dozens of topics.

SALT offers assistance on topics ranging from picking the bank that best fits your needs, to choosing student loans, to boosting your credit score.

“This is a great opportunity for our students and alumni,” said Randy Pembroke, vice president, academic affairs. “It really provides some great tools for them to use.”

ALL ABOUT SALT

The program includes:

- Proactive communication, education and one-on-one counseling from student loan experts.
- Personalized dashboard at saltmoney.org.
- Self-serve tools and calculators.
- Financial education training for groups of students.
- My Money 101, which includes self-paced courses on picking a bank, budgeting, boosting your credit score, managing credit cards, applying for financial aid, student loans and entrance counseling.
- Information and tools to help students land jobs, internships and scholarships.

ABOUT THE NAME

Though it appears to be an acronym, SALT isn’t one. The program’s name is derived from its history as one of the first forms of currency and trade. According to the Salt Works website (saltworks.us), salt “has been an important and integral part of the world’s history and has been interwoven into the daily lives of countless historic civilizations.”

The website states that its history as currency dates to the ancient Egyptians and Phoenicians hundreds of years B.C.

A super week concluded with a super queen and king during Homecoming 2013 at Washburn, as Bonnie McKee and Derek Fritz were honored during halftime of Washburn’s 44-35 win against Lindenwood University on Oct. 26 at Yager Stadium at Moore Bowl.

Those events capped a week featuring dozens of events built around the theme Superbod: A Hero’s Homecoming 2013.

“Homecoming is a great tradition that gives all of us – alumni, students, faculty and staff, and the community – a chance to celebrate Washburn,” said Jerry Farley, president, Washburn.

The week began with the Homecoming Ball on Oct. 21 and included events such as Yell Like Hell and an open house hosted by the School of Applied Studies, which was commemorating its 30-year anniversary.

SCHOOL OF LAW PROFESSOR AMONG TOP TEACHERS

Rory Bahadur, professor, Washburn School of Law, was honored as one of the top 26 law teachers in the United States in “What the Best Law Teachers Do,” a book published by Harvard University Press.

“The selection was really important to me professionally,” he said. “There are many aspects to being a law professor apart from teaching, but teaching is the part I love and it was good to know, based on the comments in the book, that my students appreciated my effort.”

A professor at the School of Law since 2007, Bahadur teaches torts, civil procedure, admiralty and maritime law and federal courts. He was voted professor of the year at Washburn in 2010 and 2012.

“Washburn Law considers itself lucky to have Professor Bahadur in its ranks,” said Thomas J. Romig, dean, School of Law.

ALPHA UPSILON THETAS CELEBRATE CENTENNIAL

Members of the 1964 pledge class for the Alpha Upsilon chapter of Kappa Alpha Theta. They will be hosting a grand celebration commemorating their anniversary from April 10-13. Photo Submitted Kappa Alpha Theta has a long, proud history in Topeka. In 1889, a group of Theta alumnae began meeting and formed what is considered to be Kappa Alpha Theta's first alumnae chapter.

From the outset, the women hoped to establish a Theta chapter at Washburn. In 1904, they were instrumental in organizing Sigma Delta Psi, which was installed as Alpha Upsilon Chapter in 1914, the year World War I began.

Among the founders were women who were pioneers and leaders in their professions such as Jessie (Wright) Whitcomb, an attorney and author whose husband was among the founders of Washburn School of Law.

One of Jessie's sons married Gertrude McClintock, whose father founded a medical school at Washburn that eventually merged with the University of Kansas Medical School.

Other notables among the founders were Anna (Adams) Baird, a missionary to Korea; Margaret (Mulvane) Morgan, whose name is familiar to generations of Ichabods because of its association to two campus buildings; and Frances (Storrs) Johnston, who received a degree in medicine at Washburn. Johnston also is credited with authoring the Washburn alma mater.

For nearly 100 years, Alpha Upsilon Chapter of Kappa Alpha Theta has provided the opportunity for college women to develop friendships that endure for a lifetime, leadership skills and values that represent nobler womanhood and a lasting desire to improve themselves and the community.

To mark the chapter's centennial and their 50 years of membership in Kappa Alpha Theta, Alpha Upsilon's 1964 initiates will host a grand celebration from April 10 to April 13 at the Crown Center Westin Hotel in Kansas City.

"Kite Strings and Heart Strings – Ties That Bind" is the theme for this centennial celebration.

The centennial will allow alumnae to renew their friendships, commencing with a casual welcome dinner on April 10.

On April 11, the group will travel to the Washburn campus for lunch, tours and updates on the plans for the university sesquicentennial in 2015. Decade dinners will be held in Kansas City that evening.

On April 12, a luncheon will honor special guests Amy Kates, president of Kappa Alpha Theta, and Kathy Tonkel, president of the Kappa Alpha Theta Foundation. They will update alumnae and collegians on the latest Theta news, including Theta's sesquicentennial in 2020.

The celebration will conclude with a banquet on the evening of April 12 at the Westin.

Details of the centennial can be found at alphaupsilon100.com. If you have questions, email alphaupsilon100@yahoo.com.

All Thetas are welcome to attend, regardless of chapter affiliations. 🏃

BECOME A MEMBER

Discounts, free admittance to several Alumni Association events, networking opportunities and much more!

That’s what you receive for joining the Washburn Alumni Association, giving back to your alma mater and showing pride in your university.

The cost? Just $35 a year. For the first five years after you receive your degree, that price is just $15 a year. If you’re a student, it’s an even better value at $10 per year.

WHAT YOU RECEIVE

- COMPLIMENTARY EVENTS: Your membership comes with free admittance to our football tailgates and monthly social, After Hours. You can eat and drink as much as you like at both events.
- DISCOUNTS: You’ll receive discounts at several businesses in the Topeka area, as well as from hotels and car rental companies. Visit washburn.edu/alumni-association for a complete list.
- BASKETBALL AND FOOTBALL TICKETS: You’ll receive buy-one, get-one-free general admission tickets for select regular season home games.

INSURANCE PROGRAM

The Alumni Association sponsors an alumni insurance program as a service to alumni. The program offers a variety of attractively priced insurance products, most of which are available to alumni, students, faculty and staff, as well as their spouses, domestic partners, children, parents and siblings:

- Auto, Home & Renters Insurance: Special rates are available to alumni and family members living in the same household.
- Health Insurance: For those with a temporary or permanent need for coverage, such as the unemployed, self-employed and recent graduates.
- Life Insurance: Long-term protection with great rates and fantastic features. Coverage is available to $50 million.
- Long Term Care Insurance: Intended to protect assets from serious erosion, while allowing access to quality care in the most appropriate and desirable setting.
- Travel Insurance: Travel medical or trip protection insurance options are available for individuals or groups traveling abroad.

- Identity Theft Protection: Protect yourself and your family against identity theft with a comprehensive solution you can count on.
- Pet Insurance: Simple, customizable dog and cat insurance plans are available.
- Annuities: An ideal tax-deferred vehicle for conservative investors who want guaranteed fixed interest rates for extended periods.
- Special Event: Liability coverage up to $2 million is available for events lasting from a few hours to as much as 10 days.
- Advisory Services: A licensed insurance professional is available, at no charge, to answer questions and provide customized guidance.

For more information, visit meyerandassoc.com/washburn or contact the program administrator at 1.800.635.7801.

HOW MEMBERSHIPS HELP US

- Your support is vital to the success of the Alumni Association and Washburn. Members drive the Association’s ability to reach its mission and goals, sustain existing programs and implement new ideas.
- Your support allows us to organize an array of events and funds our publications, reunion activities and alumni chapter meetings across the country.
- Your alumni dues also have an impact on Washburn’s ranking in several reports, including the U.S. News and World Report. Dues are also a qualifier for the amount of funding Washburn receives from the State of Kansas.

- Annual membership for recent graduates (graduated in 2008 or later): $15 per single and $25 per couple

The Power of a Plan

Establishing an estate plan can help you secure your family's future and support your charitable priorities.

To include Washburn University in your estate planning, contact Michael Bascom at the Washburn University Foundation at 785.670.4483 or mbascom@wufoundation.org, or go to GiveToWashburn.org/giftplanning.

"My decision to bolster my endowed scholarship with a planned gift will impact both current and future generations of Washburn students. It's something that has permanence. It will help a lot of students far beyond my lifetime."
